SOVIET PROSECUTOR'S BITTER TIRADE AGAINST BRITISH JUSTICE

AMAZING OUTBURST IN MOSCOW TRIAL

M.P.'S CRITICISM QUOTED IN COURT

VICKERS' EMPLOYEES TO MAKE FINAL STATEMENTS TO-DAY

MOSCOW, TO-DAY.

SCATHING DENUNCIATIONS OF BRITISH JUSTICE, WHICH HE DESCRIBED AS BEING "ONE LAW FOR THE POOR AND ANOTHER FOR THE WEALTHY," WERE MADE BY THE PROSECUTOR, M. VYSHINSKY, WHEN HE COMMENCED HIS LENGTHY SUMMING-UP AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE EVIDENCE IN THE TRIAL OF THE SIX BRITISH EMPLOYEES OF METROPOLITAN VICKERS YESTERDAY EVENING.

The accused, Messrs. Alan Monkhouse, Charles Thornton, William Macdonald, John Cushman, Charles Nordwall and A. W. Gregory, who listened composedly to the speech, are charged with military and political espionage, sabotage and bribery.

Vyshinsky commented upon the remarks made in the House of Commons on April 5, by Mr. C. M. Patrick, the Conservative Member for Tavistock, Devon, in which the latter, describing a Russian court trial he had attended said that the Court was an "organ of class war."

In spite of the many festivities of the Easter holiday, the Court opened at 10.15 a.m. yesterday and the proceedings continued until 11.40 p.m. Spirited verbal duels between the prisoners and the prosecutors marked the proceedings. The Court adjourned after a short hearing until the evening to consider a series of technical questions submitted by Monkhouse's counsel, Komodov, who asked, inter alia, how a piece of metal could be inserted through the protective grating of a turbine.

Many of the questions were disallowed by the Judge, M. Ulrich, on the ground that they concerned the Company and not the prisoners.

Only the speeches of the defence and the final statements of the accused now remain to be heard, and it is expected that the trial will be concluded to-day. The verdict, however, is not expected until to-morrow.

At the resumption of the trial at 7.15 p.m. yesterday, the Court was packed, some spectators standing, when all seats were filled.

The foreman of the Experts Committee read the answers to Monkhouse's questions, declaring, inter alia, that a piece of metal could penetrate the protective screen and wreck a turbine. Tests had shown that the turbine failed to reach the standard of the guarantee.

There was negligence in correcting blade defects, and the commission noted that one of the turbines in the Moscow Power Station was not supplied by Metropolitan Vickers.

At this stage, Monkhouse jumped up and said that he was not satisfied with the answers to his list of questions. If the guarantees were unfulfilled, Arcos ought to have been notified.

M. Roginsky, Assistant Prosecutor, said that they were not trying the Company but its employees.

Monkhouse replied that most of the answers were directed against the Company and not against the accused.

M. Vyshinsky, the Prosecutor, then began his summing up which is expected to last for five hours.

"A Class Court."

Reading from bulky notes, he declared: "Our enemies have tried to press us too hard, and I hope that the result of the trial will come as a blow to them. We will not allow anyone to interfere in our internal affairs."

Capitalists, he said, did not like the Soviet Court because it was a class Court. The British House of Commons member, Mr. C. M. Patrick, had said that he was ashamed to see Judges smoking and that they had to sit on a hard seat at a trial in Russia.

"The difference between our Court and the British courts, according to Britain, is that theirs is just not ours," he said.

'British Accused Insulted The Court'

M. Vyshinsky quoted Karl Marx, saying that in English courts there was one law for the rich and another for the poor. He said that in India, "the same third degree methods were used as in the case of the Seaforth Highlanders, who were recently imprisoned on charges under the Official Secrets Act."

"We have the only true justice in the world," he declared.

M. Vyshinsky asserted that Monkhouse and Thornton had tried to insult the Court by obeying the orders in the White Paper, but had been unable to prove ill-treatment.

Monkhouse had at first lied about the length of the interrogation and had then apologized. M. Vyshinsky hoped that the Court would pay no attention to please the criminals, Monkhouse, Cushman and Thornton, with regard to their treatment.

Russian Prisoners Denounced.

M. Vyshinsky denounced the Russian prisoners, Olenik and Kutuzova as being among the most detestable of our enemies.

He said that the Russian accused were natural saboteurs, but they must not be pardoned although sabotage was quickly being stamped out in Russia.

The crimes of Monkhouse and Thornton had been too disgusting. They were worse than the Russian prisoners, he declared.

ESPIONAGE DEFINED FROM ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

The definition of espionage was read to the Court from an English legal dictionary by M. Vyshinsky who stated: "We have an exact definition of espionage corresponding with the English definition." He pointed out that those seeking information regarding the political sentiment of the people were not guilty of espionage.

ITALIAN PILOT MISSING

Forced Down In Remote Part of Burma?

THUNDERSTORMS REPORTED ON RANGOON ROUTE

Rangoon, To-day.

There is no news of the Italian airman Signor Robbiano, since he left Calcutta on a hop to Victoria Point at 10.30 p.m. on Friday. It is feared that he was forced down in some remote part of Burma.

Wireless messages from Akyab, Saigon, Bangkok and Victoria Point report that there is no sign of him.

Flying conditions have been very bad since he left Calcutta, with rain, wind and severe thunderstorms preceding the monsoon.

The Dutch west-bound mail plane yesterday reported thunderstorms all the way from Medan to Rangoon.

Signor Robbiano left Lympne aerodrome on April 9 in an attempt to establish a new England-Australia flight record. — Reuter.

GIRL BITTEN BY CHOW DOG.

Victim In Hospital.

Mrs. Mareto of 154, Johnson Road, in a report to the Police last night, stated that while her daughter was playing on the foot path outside the house, a chow dog, owned by Mr. Saito of 74 Hennessy Road, attacked the girl and bit her in the right cheek.

The girl was immediately treated by a Japanese doctor, and later sent to the Government Civil Hospital. The dog was sent to the Kennedy Town Slaughter House for observation.

Philadelphia.

LUCAS FAILS CARDINALS

New York, To-day.

Lou Gehrig, New York Yankees' star batsman banged out his third homer of the season yesterday to give the Yanks victory over Philadelphia by 5 to 4 in a stern encounter.

The Giants were engaged in a tie with the Dodgers, the game being called off in the fourteenth innings on account of darkness.

Lucas, the St. Louis Cardinals' new pitcher, cut a sorry picture against the Cincinnati Reds, and the 1931 World Series Champions were overwhelmed by 7 to 0.

Rain held up three games—Pittsburgh v. Chicago in the National, and Boston v. Washington and Chicago v. Detroit in the American League.

The following were the results of yesterday's games:

National League.

VISITS TO ROME MAY RESULT IN NEW ALLIANCES

Trips Of German And Austrian Officials.

ITALY-GERMANY AND AUSTRIA- HUNGARY PACTS.

Vienna. The announcement that Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss has left for Rome aroused excited conjectures in Austrian and German political circles.

The chancellor's sudden decision to visit Premier Mussolini while Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen and Herman Goering, minister without portfolio, of Germany are at Rome was viewed in some quarters as another development of the movement toward closer union between Italy and Germany and between Austria and Hungary.

Central Europe has been seething for weeks with tension between Italy and Jugoslavia and their respective allies and friends and a revival here of the "anschluss" cry for union with Germany.

Must Revise Treaties.

The bonds of the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia—have been strengthened, there is a Fascist ascendancy in Germany, a dictatorship of the centre in Vienna and a still echoing hue and cry over an arms shipment from Italy, ostensibly to Hungary.

All these spell to diplomats and journalists in this "listening post of the Balkans" a hastening of the time when revision of the post-war treaties must be seriously considered by the chancelleries of the old world.

Always in the forefront of opposition to the revisionist cause are the Little Entente nations, France, their "big brother," and Poland, formed like them from the scattered pieces of the world war puzzle.

MR. ROOSEVELT CUTS HIS SALARY.

15 Per Cent. Reduction.

Washington.

President Roosevelt cashed his first pay check as President to-day and returned to the Treasury fifteen per cent. of the amount, the same reduction he ordered for government workers and the army and navy under the economy bill.

The old salary was $75,000 a year or $6,250 a month. Now, by Mr. Roosevelt's voluntary action, it is $62,500. The economy bill enacted at his request also reduced the salaries of Senators, representatives and cabinet members.

VITAL DISCUSSIONS IN WASHINGTON

STATESMEN TO CONFER ON WORLD PROBLEMS

WAR DEBTS, TARIFFS AND SILVER QUESTIONS TO BE SOLVED

World interest will be centred on Washington in the course of the next few days when President Franklin D. Roosevelt will hold a series of conversations with leading statesmen from Britain, France and Canada. Momentous results are expected from the informal conferences which will deal with the major problems facing the world.

The British Premier, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and the French delegate, former Premier Edouard Herriot, sailed for the United States on Saturday. Invitations have been accepted by Germany, Italy, China and Japan, whose delegates will arrive later in the month. The conversations will deal largely with war debts, and will also act as a preliminary meeting to the forthcoming World Economic Conference.

Inter-Governmental debts, the silver question and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's disarmament plans are being discussed preparatory to further discussions between Mr. Roosevelt and the debtor nations. Japan, in view of her particular position after her notification of secession from the League, is now more favourably disposed toward the impending meetings in Washington than when the project was first proposed.

New York.

President Roosevelt regards Canada as the likeliest country with which to negotiate reciprocal pacts, which would serve as a model for subsequent agreements elsewhere. These pacts would include agreements regarding tariffs and the limitation or control of wheat production.

Mr. R. B. Bennett, the Canadian Premier, will visit the White House soon after the arrival of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

Argentina will be asked to join in the proposed wheat pact and it is hoped that it will be possible to include Soviet-Russia in it.

The Gold Standard.

The conversations between Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, and Mr. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of State, are now definitely stated to have included questions connected with the gold standard, the silver problem and shipping subsidies.

Mr. Hull has not pressed for an immediate return to the gold standard by Great Britain, on which the United States had previously insisted, but it is reported that Sir Ronald Lindsay agreed upon the need for establishment of currency.

It is understood that Mr. Hull did not agree with the British complaint with regard to United States shipping subsidies.

Silver And Wheat.

Mr. Hull indicated that among the subjects to be considered in the forthcoming conversations would be restoration of the price of silver and control of wheat surpluses.

The tariff question is expected to overshadow other issues, Mr. Roosevelt favouring a general lowering of present trade barriers in an effort to stimulate recovery.

He is reported to have ready a request to Congress to lower American duties by a general 10 per cent. reduction for power to negotiate reciprocal agreements with other nations.

The move to restore the price of silver might have the effect of disarming congressional advocates of monetization of the metal. Speaker Henry T. Rainey stated recently silver was a matter for international action and proposals for congressional action would not be considered at this session. The world conference, to open at London about June 15, is expected to take up the question of monetary policy.

President Roosevelt.

and credit policy, exchange difficulties, the level of prices and the movement of capital. War debts, reparations and specific tariff rates are excluded. Congress has voted $40,000 for American participation.

Einstein Will Go To Madrid

Renounces German Citizenship.

Madrid.

Dr. Albert Einstein, world famous physicist who renounced his German citizenship because of the wave of anti-Semitism in that country, accepted an invitation to-day to become a member of the faculty of the University of Madrid.

He is now in the United States, connected with Princeton University and lecturing.

Dr. Einstein, the discoverer of the relativity theory, is now 64 years old. Two of the activities in which he has been particularly interested, the pacifist movement and Zionism, have helped make him lose favour with the new regime of Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

ROBBERS FAIL TO FORCE DOOR.

Mr. Murkovich, manager of the Salon Des Modes, Hankow Road, made a report to the Police late last night to the effect that an attempt had been made to force the door of his shop. Last month gang robbers made a successful haul from the premises, taking away with them jewellery and cash to the extent of $2,500.

CHINESE GOODS DISPLAYED.

Exhibition Opened At Sincere's.

PROMINENT VISITORS
AT FUNCTION.

"I have travelled to many places, and everywhere have seen exhibitions of Japanese goods; the Japanese seize every opportunity of displaying their manufactures and we Chinese must do the same," said General Wong Keung, on the occasion of the opening of the exhibition of Chinese manufactures, at the premises of the Sincere Co., Ltd., on Saturday night.

General Wong Keung opened the exhibition in place of General Tsai Ting-kai, who was unable to be present. He is General Tsai Ting-kai's military adviser, and, last year, assisted him in the defence of Woon-sung.

The other official guests, at the banquet which followed the opening of the exhibition were, General Tam Kai-sau, and Mr. Woo Man-chun, member of the Canton branch of the Kuomintang.

The three official guests were escorted to Hong Kong by Mr. Ma Man Fai, manager of the Sincere Company, and Mr. Ma Luk Pun, sub-manager of the company, and arrived in Hong Kong on Saturday evening by train.

Many prominent local Chinese were present at the banquet, among whom were: Mr. Chan Lim-pak, manager of the Nanyang Bros. Tobacco Co., and Mr. Wong Kwong-tin, Chairman of the local Chinese Chamber of Commerce.

The second period of the exhibition commences to-morrow, at noon, when the general public will be admitted. From to-morrow until next Sunday the products of Hong Kong and Canton will be on view, about 43 exhibitors having goods on display.

Owing to the lack of space, the exhibition of Shanghai goods was held last week.

Some of the local manufacturers who are occupying stands are: The Sincere Company, manufacturers of perfumes and toilet articles, the Nanyang Bros. Tobacco Co., the World Pencil Co., Messrs. On Lok Yuen & Co., the Amoy Canning Corp., the National Lacquer & Paint Products Co. Ltd., and the Man Fai Printing Ink Works.

The Exhibition, which has been interesting Hong Kong for the past week, is an effort to popularize products and it is felt that the beautiful silks etc., which have been admired by so many must be instrumental in bringing the excellent quality and workmanship of the Chinese produce to the notice of all who visit the Exhibition.

The following eight days will be devoted to displaying the goods of Hong Kong and Canton merchants. Forty-three factories have amalgamated in the Exhibition, and their total capital represents a figure of approximately $30,000,000.

Sincere's own products from their Perfumery and Aerated Water Factories will be one of the largest in the Exhibition and other special lines consist of underwear, hosiery, canned goods, glassware, confectionery and electrical flashlights etc.

SANDAL STOCKINGS.

For the top-less sandals there are many kinds of new sandal stockings on the market that are sheer as the air, have no seams that show and no double toes to mar the effect of the sandals.

NEW SEASON BERETS ARE LARGER.

Wool Straws For Sports Wear.

BRAID TREATMENT.

Berets are still with us. The new ones are considerably larger than those of last season; they are draped in very dashing lines, giving them the effect of being real hats. They are likely to be very high at the left side toward the back and extend forward, shading all the right eye and much of the left. Maria Guy and Marie Alphonse are doing interesting new things with berets; Agnes, too, has a number of them.

Le Monnier, who always makes some of the youngest looking hats to be found in Paris, is going right on doing it. She spurs lofty effects as being old and, though she gives her crowns sufficient depth, she makes them appear flat by clever treatments. She is featuring straw plateaus, plaited into airy heights a little to the back of the top of the head, with most of the back coiffure hidden by a cachepeigne shaped close to the head.

Favourite straws are celtagal, yedda, neora, somalis and the mat straw. The new wool straw, woven of straw and Angora, tends to replace fabric for sports. Straw braids are preferred to woven shapes.

An interesting point in smart hat evolution is the manner in which the braids are treated. They are no longer just sewed together round and round, but great care in design is noted, so that the cloche that looks simplest from a distance, turns out to be a marvel of intricate handwork on closer examination.

COSSACK CAPS AND SPAHIS' FEZES.

Cossack caps and spahis' fezes, they all go the same way on. Boaters, "Dolly Varden," pancake hats—the shapes are very varied. They divide into two distinct classes: the high-crowned, brimless hats, and the low-crowned ones with brims.

In the first section come the fez hats, rising high to greet the spring. Toques like a dunce's hat of a clown's at a circus rise to a point. Cossack caps are also members of the high-crowned set.

Smart young people, and those who are not afraid to wear startling fashions, will be seen in high-crowned toques this spring.

Menu Suggestions For To-morrow

A Dinner Menu
Baked Halibut Steak Tomato Sauce
Escalloped Potatoes
Buttered Celery
Biscuits Orange Marmalade
Apple Cobbler Cream

Coffee
Tomato Sauce
2 cups tomatoes
1 cup water
2 bay leaves
1 slice onion
3 celery leaves
4 whole cloves
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon paprika
3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
Mix all ingredients, excepting butter and flour. Cook slowly in covered pan for 20 minutes. Press through strainer, add to butter which has been melted and mixed with flour. Cook three minutes, stirring constantly. Serve with fish.

Orange Marmalade
6 medium sized oranges
2 lemons
10 cups cold water
Sugar
Use sharp, knife and cut fruits into very thin slices. Remove seeds. Mix fruit and water, let stand 24 hours. Boil slowly one hour. Measure and add equal parts of sugar. Let stand four hours. Boil gently until marmalade thickens and "jellies" when small portion is poured onto cold plate. Pour into sterilized jars and when cold, seal with melted paraffin.

Apple Cobbler
3 cups apples, sliced
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup water
3 tablespoons butter
Mix ingredients and pour into shallow buttered pan. Cover with crust.

Crust
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons fat.
2/3 cup milk.
Mix dry ingredients. Cut in fat and add milk slowly. When soft dough forms, pat out on floured board, fit over apple mixture. Make four holes on top to allow steam to escape during cooking. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. Serve warm or cold.

LATEST STYLES IN LINGERIE.

Night Gowns Preferred
To Pyjamas.

The New closeness—or slimmness—of cut is extended to lingerie. I have noticed some of the prettiest nightgowns are fashioned and shaped more like a slip. These models are preferred to pyjamas, and take up much less room in a suit case, even with their attractive little coasters to match.

To travel light is smart. To be inflicted with trunks full of clothes is considered very old-fashioned, but "newly-wed" will have a goodly supply of lingerie-de-luxe in addition to their trousseau frocks and frills!

Apart from a fussy bed jacket, all boudoir and dressing gowns are fashioned on slim, almost tailored lines, but they can be dainty in colouring and fine hand-work.

Some of the loveliest jackets and gowns are made of Shetland, lined finest quality satin and crepe.

Wool-lace is one of the most useful fabrics for boudoir or travel, for it takes up no space, and is, with its silken covering or lining, as warm as a thick flannel.

When travelling a couple of these gowns can be taken to wear over the nightgown or pyjama suit.

"THE MUMMY"—CENTRAL THEATRE

The "horror" phase in pictures has not yet ended. Boris Karloff's next, "The Mummy" is now showing at the Central Theatre.

It is a tale of ancient Egypt, with huge sets designed by Will Fogarty, the American scenic artist, and Boris Karloff breaking all records for fantastic make-up as a 3,700-years-old mummy.

A clever new star, Zita Johann, who made a tremendous "hit" in "Tiger Shark" gives a very impressive performance.

"ME AND MY GAL"—KING'S THEATRE.

Based on an original story by Barry Connors and Philip Klein, and directed by Raoul Walsh, "Me And My Gal" featuring Spencer Tracy and Joan Bennett is now showing at the King's Theatre.

Joan Bennett portrays the role of a sophisticated cashier in a downtown New York restaurant, while Tracy appears as a smart young detective. Their romance leads to exciting paths, particularly for Tracy, who runs to earth a gang of desperate bank robbers. This film, the second Tracy-Bennett partnership, is as good if not better than their first picture, "She Wanted A Millionaire" which scored such a huge success wherever it was shown.

"AS YOU DESIRE ME"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

Greta Garbo, most famous of all screen stars, and the idol of millions, makes a welcome re-appearance on the local screen in "As You Desire Me", now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

With a cast including such famous stars as Eric von Stroheim, Owen Moore and Albert Conti, the film gives an excellent picture of the many scenic beauties during the Italian "Feast of Midsummer"—a traditional celebration for lovers.

The film which is adapted from the stage play of the same name, has scored a huge success wherever it was shown.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

The inimitable Clive Brooke, star of many pictures, comes back on the local screen in "Sherlock Holmes" now showing at the Oriental Theatre.

Like all his other picture, Brooke by his wonderful personality and acting powers, carries the film through, making it one not soon forgotten.

BRIDGE NOTES

DUPLICATE CONTRACT.

Although the perfect form of Duplicate play has not yet been devised, there can be no doubt that it is a genuine test of skill. While the element of luck is not eliminated entirely no player can blame the cards for his failure. Too much importance should not be attached to the winning of a single contest. When one team is definitely stronger than another it will win certainly, but where merit is level surprising results may occur.

On the same cards, for example, a contract of Three No Trumps may be declared. At one table it is won owing to the initial lead. At the other table the contract is defeated because of a different lead. It cannot be argued that the play in either case was bad. The lead which enabled the players to make their contract may have been sound enough. The other may have been a pure fluke. Similarly, a grand slam which ought not to have been called may be won by a side through a particular opening lead or a lucky finesse, thus giving them a considerable advantage over the really better side, which has been content to call more correctly, only a little slam. Differences, of course, occur in the bidding. On some hands it is difficult or impossible to say exactly what the correct declaration should be. The fact that a declaration succeeds does not render it correct. Bad calls sometimes win at Duplicate as they do in ordinary play and perfectly proper declarations may be defeated, but allowing for the vagaries of luck, it is safe to say that success in a series of contests is a proof of merit. A pair or team which wins consistently at Duplicate has established its supremacy, and this should be acknowledged ungrudgingly.

As pointed out last week, a good club card-room player is not by any means always a good match player. Duplicate play suits certain temperaments. There are those who have a flair for it, and those who find it tiresome and boring in the extreme. The timid and shy have a poor time. Self-confidence is a great asset, and the successful match-player must possess it in marked degree, but he must not be a rank egotist. He must have confidence, not only in himself, but in his partner, and must be prepared to subordinate himself for the benefit of his side. Duplicate play necessitates good team work. The individual must be an opportunist. He must not falter. Missed opportunities and mistakes may be redeemable in ordinary play, but not at Duplicate, in which one slip may be fatal. To miss a game declaration when the game is procurable is grievous. If the reasonable chance is there it must be taken; to play for paltry penalties is not worth while. On the other hand, flag-flying at Duplicate does not pay. You cannot recover a big fine by forcing your adversaries to forfeit game. A big penalty is a dead loss.

Steadiness is essential. Above all else these contests have shown that it is the stable player who wins. Brilliance may bring off an occasional coup but reliability wins in the long run. So called "psychic" bids are at a discount. They seldom achieve their purpose. Just as at Poker the habitual bluffer is caught so at Duplicate the only player who can ho, to bring off a psychic bid successfully is the one who is generally sound in his declarations and who has established a reputation for propriety. The conduct of a Duplicate Tournament especially on a large scale is no easy matter. It involves good organization beforehand if things are to go smoothly. The manager should take no part in the play. He should be free to deal with any difficulties or questions that may arise, to collect the boards and score sheets in order to be able to announce the results speedily at the end of the match. It is well to have typewritten rules placed on the tables as it saves a great deal of time and trouble and is preferable to verbal announcement. The design should be to make everything easy and straightforward for the players so that they may have no doubt as to their procedure. Many tournaments are spoilt by inadequate preliminary staff work. A referee should be appointed to settle any dispute and his decisions should be regarded as final. The manager should decide how many tables can be accommodated. Many tournaments are overcrowded and the chairs and tables are uncomfortable. Above all it is desirable not to make these contests too long. Four hours should be the limit. In that time a match of 32 hands can be played without undue hurrying if the organization is good.

LESSON SERMON.

First Church of Christ, Scientist—Hong Kong.

"Doctrine of atonement" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 16.

The Golden Text was: "There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Tim: 2:5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For what glory is it, if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed." (1 Pet. 2:20, 21, 23, 24).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus bore our infirmities; he knew the error of mortal belief, and 'with his stripes (the rejection of error) we are healed.' 'Despised and rejected of men,' returning blessing for cursing, he taught mortals the opposite of themselves, even the nature of God; and when error felt the power of Truth, the scourge and the cross awaited the great Teacher." (P. 20:14).

RULES ABOUT WRITING.

Famous Novelist's Opinion.

Mr. A. E. W. Mason does not believe in rules about writing "the famous novelist." In his opinion, "Nobody alive can lay down laws about it as quickly and as pedantically as they can, the next generation will upset them. Anybody who is going to make rules about writing is going to be proved to be wrong. There are no rules about writing. The only thing you can say about writing is that there is a sort of tact which may or may not keep you right."

"If you look at the people who have survived from generation to generation, the pundits have usually been wrong. Jane Austen was never a great 'swell' in her day but she is the Dickens of a 'swell' now. Balzac the Frenchman, is 'alive' to-day. He was supposed by the French critics to be writing for his day only. So was Dumas, but both have survived all the people whom the Press happened to shout about in their day."

Sir James Fraser.

It cannot be often that a scholar who himself still lecturing has a lecture foundation named after him. This tribute is, however, enjoyed by Sir James Fraser, the author of that famous work "The Golden Bough."

A Frazer Lectureship in social anthropology was established in 1921, and the addresses are delivered yearly, in rotation, at Oxford, Cambridge, Glasgow, and Liverpool. Eight of them, by "divers hands," as the modest announcement says, of as many eminent men, are appearing in a volume which the Macmillans announce.

They published "The Golden Bough" and Sir James Fraser's other books, and his association with them must now be as long as John Morley's was.

BOOK RETURNED 38 YEARS LATE.

Cambridge, Massachusetts. — "Fineless week" at the Cambridge Public Library has resulted in the return of a book, "The Story of Scotland," which was 38 years overdue.

Fines on the book, which originally cost the library 2-6 in 1890, would have amounted to £58—the sum the borrower escaped paying by virtue of the cancellation offer. Records show he borrowed it in 1894.—Reuter.

HOWARD SPRING'S

Guide To The New Books

Story Of A Family That Shocked A Suburb: Vendetta Against Police In A Novel.

The Drive. By F. O. Mann. (Faber and Faber, 7s. 6d.)

The Drive was one of those suburban streets (they exist principally in the imagination of novelists) which are very, very suburban, rather like a torpid liver. It is an old and amusing game to apply a jolt to a street of that sort. It has been done in various ways: the young couple suspected of living in sin is the favourite device; but Mr. Mann chooses to shatter the bourgeois tranquillity by enflaming it with a family that is like a machine-gun. The children roar and rush about and talk a language "indifferently compounded from books and the gutter."

They all have mad nicknames: Lighters, Horrors, Penny, Snuggers, Tongo, Whiskey. They are like "gawky fairies," their mother is like "a stately and amiable stag," and their father, a professor, is "a half-tamed yet wholly humorous animal." Everybody in the house paints or sings or writes novels or music. A walk with these Otways is "rather like going out with the Beggars' Opera," and, as for dress, "comfort before decency any day" is the rule.

The book is merely a series of snapshots of this family in action—and, believe me, action is the word. They come, they explode in the Drive, some pantomimicly gather the pieces and remove them to Oxford, and once more there is peace. The book has no development; but the Otways are highly amusing, though rather unreal, as long as they last. Not unlike that old music-hall turn "The Ten Loonies."

X v. Rex. By Martin Porlock. (Collins, 7s. 6d.)

X was the unknown which had pitted itself against Rex, the law of the land. X struck at the law through the police. A policeman's life was decidedly not a happy one when X was on the war-path.

You might be a dear old sergeant comfortable in a suburban station, or a hefty young prize-fighting bobby on a beat in Mayfair, or a gallant equestrian comfortable riding a white horse at Hampstead, but X would get you by day or night. You might be shot, or sand-bagged, or slit open, or find yourself falling down a manhole that opened suddenly at your feet.

Mr. Porlock is as good at this sort of thing as anyone I have read for a long time. He maintains the ascending curve of excitement and achieves a fine climax.

Separate Paths. By Barbara Gooldeen. (Chapman and Hall, 7s. 6d.)

This book is about a woman who wanted her children to live according to her views, not their own.

These are ill days for such an experiment, and it is almost needless to say that Emma did not succeed. She even learned the wisdom of standing out of the light. Many a book has been built on this framework, but I cannot recall one so curiously dry, so lacking in glamour, as Miss Gooldeen's. There's not a sight of earth or sky, not a moment of human relationship, that catches the light.

"Sometimes they spent whole Sundays on the river, or went for long and tiring walks in the country. Presently they were separated for fortnight.... Sepplins missed her abominably, and they had a touching reunion in Richmond Park." It's all dry statement of that sort. Miss Gooldeen seems to have felt nothing about these people.

Maria Jane Jewsbury. By Eric Gillett. (Oxford University Press, 6s. 6d.)

One of this year's minor centenaries concerns Maria Jane Jewsbury, who was born in Derbyshire, spent much of her life in Manchester, and died of cholera at Poona in 1833.

Mr. Gillett has written a brief, charming memoir of Jane and has followed it with a selection from her writings. She is a figure of some interest because of her friendship with Wordsworth and his circle; and her writings show her to have possessed a dash of that wit-malice which flowered most perfectly in the work of Jane Austen.

'OCCASIONAL NOTES'

Journal Of Horticultural Society.

The second number of "Occasional Notes" the organ of the Hong Kong Horticultural Society has been published. Copies have been sent to the members and the publication is on sale to the general public at $1.50 per copy.

It contains an article on the number of orchids which can be cultivated in Hong Kong, several of them being species which have been introduced to the Colony, and which require special care. This article is illustrated by a number of beautifully coloured plates.

Dr. Herklots deals with several flowering shrubs and has contributed a number of excellent drawings.

Other articles deal with the growing of Carnations and other plants and also with soils and fertilisers. Books on gardening are reviewed at the end of the number.

SCOTT SELLS IN FRANCE.

Sir Walter Scott, the centenary of whose death was commemorated at the Sorbonne recently is still a best-seller in France. His only rivals in the English language are Kipling and (somewhat unexpectedly) Fenimore Cooper.

The Kipling chiefly read by French students is the Kipling of "The Jungle Book" and "Plain Tales from the Hills." His poetry is practically unknown in France. Dickens and Thackeray are less admired by the French than by the Russians, Meredith, Hardy and Wells are little read. Probably more French readers are familiar with Aldous Huxley, Virginia Woolf and David Garnett than with the Brontës, Fielding, Smollett and Defoe.

The "First Efforts in Criticism" bring out her claws very well and must have scratched a number of sensitive contemporary skins. Mr. Gillett should be thanked for recognising that Jane Jewsbury deserved to be rescued from oblivion.

The Art and Craft of Writing. By J. W. Marriott. (Harrap, 6s.)

Mr. J. W. Marriott sets out in "The Art and Craft of Writing" that which should be known on the subject by "intelligent young men and women between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five."

It is mostly plain common-sense, but I quarrel with Mr. Marriott, as I would with anyone else who preached the old heresy that it is a good rule to stick to Anglo-Saxon as much as possible.

"There are," he goes on to say, "times when circumlocutions are permissible," and that sentence is a queer comment on his own doctrine. The word "liar," says Mr. Marriott, hurts more than the word "prevaricator," so we must circumlocute. But one would not call a man a liar unless one intended to hurt him. The plain truth of the matter is that English as we write it to-day is not Anglo-Saxon, but something infinitely richer and more flexible, an amalgam of tongues. New instruments have been added to the orchestra, and a good writer uses them. When Shakespeare wrote:—

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.
—the first line very "foreign," the second pure English—he knew what he was about. How does it sound? was all he asked himself. It sounds grand. There is not exclusive virtue in the old oaten pipe.

We Find Australia. By Charles H. Holmes. (Hutchinson, 12s. 6d.)

Starting from Melbourne and travelling with the sea on his left hand, Mr. Holmes made a 12,000-mile journey round Australia.

Most of it was by train, but there were long stretches by boat, for sometimes the journeyed just off the land instead of just on it, and by airplane and motorcar. This plentifully illustrated record tells of the continent's settlers and aborigines, of its natural beauties and urban conveniences, of its trades and industries, old and new. Mr. Holmes took his time. He went thoroughly into everything that interested him, and he has produced a book that splendidly conveys both his interest and his information which he has put to

Literary Notes And News

"You and me will bunk together," J. H. Thomas said to the King during the general strike in 1926. At the end of their talk the King said a little sadly: "Oh, well, Thomas, if the worst happens I suppose all this," indicating with a gesture the palace and grounds, "will vanish." A smile spread over Mr. Thomas's face, as he replied: "Of, if it comes to that, sir, you and me will bunk." This is one of the stories which Basil Fuller has told in his Life Story of Mr. Thomas.

"Scottish Abbeys and Social Life" is a book by G. G. Coulton which the Cambridge University Press will publish. Dr. Coulton's book has many illustrations.

"England, Their England," by A. G. MacDonell, one of Macmillan's new books, is a study, in the form of a story, of English character and characteristics made by a young Scot from Aberdeenshire.

"The Enchanted Isles, or Life in the Hebrides," by Alasdair Alpin MacGregor, is one of Alexander MacLachlan's new books.

"A Book of Scottish Verse," which has been chosen by George Burnett, is in Methuen's list.

AUSTRALIA AND THE HUXLEYS.

For Australia to put a ban of exclusion on Mr. Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World" is like slapping one of its own children, or great-grandchildren, for Aldous Huxley's grandmother, the wife of the famous Professor, was Henrietta Anne Heathorn, of Sydney. She met Huxley while he was serving in southern waters as a surgeon in the Navy.

Mrs. Huxley had literary gifts which found expression in a volume of poems, and from one of them Prof. Huxley chose the three lines which were inscribed on his tombstone:

Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts
that weep;
For still He giveth His beloved
sleep,
And if an endless sleep He wills,
so best.

MACAO GOVERNOR ENTERTAINED

Function At Repulse Bay Hotel.

DEPARTURE FOR PORTUGAL

The Governor of Macao, Lt. Col. A. J. Bernardes de Miranda, was entertained at a luncheon party, given by Mr. Lo Wing-kit, at the Repulse Bay Hotel, on Friday, the eve of his departure for Portugal, where he is to attend an Imperial Conference in which the Governors of all Portuguese colonies will take part.

Among those present were the Governor, his wife, daughter and son, Mr. and Mrs. Dias Costa (Colonial Treasurer), Dr. and Mrs. J. Mendonca (Chief Justice, Supreme Court), Lieut. V. Correia (Director of Naval Yard), Lieut. D'Oliveira Soares (Harbour Master), Capt. Britto (Commander, Harbour Police), all from Macao, Mr. and Mrs. Mok Kon-sang, Mr. H. S. Mok, managing director of Canton Municipal Bank, Mr. and Mrs. Lo Wing-sik, who have just returned from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Lo Hum-cheung, Mrs. Mok Sik-yim, Mr. Lee C. Solomon, Miss Margaret Pau (daughter of the Comptroller of the Chartered Bank, Yokohama), Misses Susan and Betty Lo, Madame Rocha Santos (wife of the Acting Governor of Macao), Mr. and Mrs. J. A. E. da Silva, Messrs. Lo Wing-cheung and Lo Wing-tsun.

In the evening the Governor and party were the guests of Mr. Lo Hum-cheung at the Hong Kong Hotel. The guests were the same as at the luncheon, and included the Portuguese Consul, Mr. Botelho and Mr. Li Chai-tong, in addition.

STATE LOTTERY FOR NEW ZEALAND.

Matter For Next Session Of Parliament.

MANY APPROVE MOVE.

Wellington, N.Z.

There is a growing body of opinion in Parliamentary circles in favour of a State lottery, and while no steps in this direction are meditated at the moment, the subject is one that is likely to be brought directly before the Government early in the next session, which will probably commence in August. Already 30 members of the Coalition party have approved the idea. No members of the Ministry or members of the Opposition have yet been approached.

Those who are responsible for the presentation of the idea declare that two motives underlie their scheme. The first is that a State lottery would do much to increase the revenue of the Government, and the second is that it would divert much of the money—estimated at something like £250,000—which is sent annually out of New Zealand for lottery tickets. It has been ascertained that within the last month over £20,000 has been sent from New Zealand to the free city of Danzig for lottery tickets, while there is a huge sum sent weekly to Tattersalls in Tasmania. Much money has also been sent to Ireland for sweepstake tickets.

An investigation has been made into the New South Wales system of State lottery, which has proved so popular there, and when the matter is placed before the Government, in a few months' time, full details of the necessary machinery will accompany the proposal. The only reason for delaying presentation until the next session of Parliament is recognition that an effort must be made to conclude the present session, as its continuance is having a disturbing effect on the whole business of the country.

Many subsidiary reasons have been prepared as arguments in favour of a State lottery. One of these is that it would take money away from book-makers and divert it into taxable channels. The continued success of art unions, which are, it is claimed, nothing more or less than lotteries, is also advanced as another argument in favour of the State taking over the business.—Reuter.

The exhibition of pictures by Miss Hilda Treagus, which has been attracting so many people to the Gloucester Building, is being continued until this evening, so that another opportunity is offered to the public of viewing her outstanding work.

BRITAIN'S PROGRESS IN INDIA

French Missionary's View.

TROUBLESOME FUTURE.

Marseilles. Father Lhande, a prominent member of the Jesuit organisation and a well-known preacher of Notre Dame in Paris, had some striking comments to make on Britain's part in the development of India when he landed here on his return from a five-months' tour of the Catholic Missions in that country.

"In India," he declared, "a great unhappiness weighs on the population—375,000,000 men live under the oppression of superstition, under the terror of their gods. There is no spirit of confidence among them. If one wishes to establish a comparison with the French system of colonisation, we are inferior from a purely material point of view; but to our credit, we have the entire confidence of our people, which is the result of our moral work."

"In my opinion, we can reproach England in her colonisation methods with the lack of using the strong psychological factor of Christianity, and it is owing to this that I think they will fail in their great undertaking."

"I have discovered that France is only known in India through her missionaries. Without mixing in politics, we accomplish a moral work there which is highly French. We are loved. Personally I wish that the British shall remain in that great country in order to maintain peace among the various races, which are always fighting against one another. But the future of India seems very dark and troublesome."

"I think that, at present, the Gandhi movement is on the decline. Gandhi has lost very much."—Reuter.

AUSTRALIAN LOAN COUNCIL

Meeting Necessary To Review Finances.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Canberra, Saturday.

A meeting of the Australian Loan Council will soon be necessary in order to review the progress made by the various State Governments towards Budget equilibrium and also to examine the prospects for next year and make preliminary arrangements for financing next year's programme of unemployment relief work.

It is expected that the Federal Government will propose a conference to be held at Canberra at the end of May.

U.S. NAVAL MEN ENTERTAINED.

Medway Petty Officers Hosts At Dinner.

Chief and Petty Officers of the U. S. S. Black Hawk and attendant U. S. destroyers now in harbour, were on Saturday night entertained to a dinner at the King's Restaurant by the Chief and Petty Officers of H.M.S. Medway.

After the dinner, which was given in return to a similar function to the Medway on her recent visit to Manila, the company settled to a very enjoyable evening, Chief Stoker Petty Officer Crawford being responsible for a musical entertainment.

The arrangements were in the hands of Chief Engine Room Artificer Pearce and Electrical Artificer Herret.

GHOST IN TOWER OF LONDON

Sentry Deserted Post For Guardroom.

WHITE SPECTRAL FIGURE

Once again a ghost has appeared within the Tower of London to a sentry keeping his post at night. The military authorities have had to take notice of it.

In fact, the sentry's adventure has caused more stir among the Tower's populace—not a small one—than the daily exercise of a Scottish officer under arrest.

The Guardman who saw the spectre was on his lonely task not far distant from the Bloody Tower. His surroundings were of the gloomiest. As he was the only witness of what occurred, his own story must be taken.

He was standing motionless, devoutly hoping that his two hours' spell of duty would soon come to an end. Suddenly a white spectral figure appeared, as if from nowhere, and seemed to float towards him. As it did so, he saw to his amazement that it was the figure of a headless woman.

Confronted by such an apparition, the sentry fled, making his way to the safety of the guardroom, greatly unnerved. Whether or not he used his bayonet seems uncertain.

The military authorities have maintained a strict reticence. It is recognised that there is always a possibility of a particularly impressionable man concluding that he has seen a ghost in such surroundings as those of the Tower of London, at midnight or thereabouts.

The usual punishment of a soldier for leaving his post is not, as a rule, resorted to in such cases, but he is called upon for explanation. In this instance that procedure was adopted.

A Vision of Anne Boleyn. The Tower, as might be expected, is not lacking in ghost stories. The most circumstantial of these is the appearance of Queen Anne Boleyn to a young soldier of the 60th Rifles, in circumstances which were corroborated—but not the ghost—by the late Field-Marshal Lord Grenfell, who was at the time a young lieutenant in the regiment.

The King's House of to-day was anciently the Lieutenant's Lodgings, and a little room there is pointed out as that in which Anne Boleyn passed her last night on earth. Beneath its window one night a sentry was found lying prostrate and unconscious on the ground.

When he recovered he said that a figure in white had approached him; that he challenged, but the figure came on; that he charged it with his bayonet, and meeting with no resistance he fell in a dead faint, in which condition visiting rounds had found him.

This story was corroborated by two comrades, who gave evidence before the court-martial.

The court-martial, lacking imagination for ghosts, charged the man with being drunk. He was acquitted.

Other sentries stationed later on the same spot declared that the phantom also appeared to themselves, and the post became of such evil repute that men tried to avoid it.

GREAT LADIES OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

"We are all going—we are all going," the dying man told her, reassuringly.

If Mrs. Lincoln is connected with the conservatory at the White House and the little schoolmarm with its library, the first Mrs. Roosevelt is connected with every place in it which suggests modern comfort.

Made It Home.

She found it a five-roomed flat with the rest given over to offices. She turned it into a habitable dwelling which should earn her the undying gratitude of its future occupants.

Of all the stories of the White House, the one I like best is told of Mrs. Harding.

"Main street has come to the White House," sneered, snobbish tongues, when she and her husband arrived there.

At which the President's wife, with her wholesome laugh, agreed that they were "just folks." And that I have a notion is how the latest Lady of the White House would like herself, and how she would like herself, and how she would like herself.

To-Day's Short Story.

AT THE WORLD'S EDGE

By R. H. Bruce Lockhart.

WE had stopped alongside the wharf of a little Chinese mining village. The Chinese in the Malay States have a knack of settling down on unheard-of out-of-the-way corners, but this was the dreariest spot I had ever struck. Although only a few hundred yards from the sea the place was completely shut out from sight. A sluggish, mud-coloured river-mouth, which, except for a small channel in mid-stream, receded at low tide into a mangrove swamp, a tiny wharf almost falling to pieces, and a row of fragile Chinese huts built on piles—that was all. No one ever visited the place. Once a year the Chinese owner brought his report down to Port Dickson, and with that the Government was satisfied. The Malays, the lawful owners of the land, would not live in such a hole. If five or six hundred Chinese could make a living there, well, they were welcome to it.

I had finished my inspection—the first one that had been made by a white man for over five years—and was lying back in a long chair under the awning of the diminutive Government launch preparatory to starting back for Port Dickson. My Malay crew were anxious to get under steam as soon as possible. The place with its silent, mournful-looking Chinese depressed them, and, as Ahmet, the head engineer, said, "Allah had overlooked this spot when he made the earth beautiful."

Certainly no other race but Chinese would have lived there. The overpowering heat of the afternoon sun, the rotten, fetid stench from the river, the dismal surroundings, all seemed to smelt of death. What compensations could induce a man to support life in such a place as this?

As if in answer to my silent question, a voice hailed me from the edge of the wharf.

"Say, mate, have you got such a thing as a bottle of whisky on board?"

Perhaps I had fallen asleep. At any rate I had not seen anyone approach, and the sound of a white man's voice in a place like this made me jump. Before I could reply he had scrambled on board and taken a seat on the rail beside me.

He was a short, sandy-haired little fellow, with shifty, bloodshot eyes that darted from side to side incessantly. There was at least seven days' growth on his face, and a very dirty khaki suit, many sizes too large for him, sat on his skin and bones like a farmer's overcoat on a scraggy scarecrow.

Ahmet brought up a glass and I signed to the man to help himself. Without speaking he took the bottle and, half filling his glass, sent a dash of soda into it and drank it down at a gulp. Then, drawing his hand across his mouth, he waved a lean arm towards the mine.

"Do you wonder now that a man drinks?" he said at last.

LIMITING RUBBER PRODUCTION.

Dutch Minister Favours Restriction Plan.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

London, Saturday. According to the Amsterdam correspondent of the "Financial Times," M. De Graaf, Dutch Minister for the Colonies, has issued a declaration stating that he considers the compulsory restriction of rubber production desirable in every respect, as soon as a workable and efficient plan is available.

Such a plan, he states, should also cover native production and be accepted by the British Government.

P. I. GOVERNOR.

Appointment Confirmed Of Mr. Frank Murphy.

(Reuter's Special Service.)

Washington, Saturday. The United States Senate has confirmed the appointment of Mr. Frank Murphy as Governor of Michigan.

I looked at him keenly, and, meeting my glance, he shuffled and turned away.

Not a very attractive animal, I thought to myself. Probably a beach-comber who wants a passage to Port Dickson. But how on earth did he get here?

As we sat studying each other, there was a dull splash close to the wharf. A couple of crocodiles were disputing themselves impudently among the refuse that the Malays had thrown from the launch.

The man beside me shuddered violently and, jumping down from his seat, began to walk up and down the narrow deck.

Suddenly he started to speak. "It's two years now," he said, "two years of hell, and it's killing me. You're the first white man I've seen for twenty-four months. You can do what you like with me afterwards, but you'll listen to me now, won't you?"

The perspiration was pouring off his brow, and fear, cringing and loathsome, was written in every line of his face.

"My name's—well, you don't need

TO-MORROW'S STORY.

To-morrow's story will be "The Man Who Belonged To Me," by Giovanni Papini.

to know that, but I'm white all right. I was a decent engineer once—yes, trained on the Clyde—and as cool a hand with a ship's engine as God ever made. You can look at me now, but I'm not kidding you. Ten years ago I got a job on the coasters out here. I was twenty-four then and you bet I jumped at it. I did well, too, and saved a bit. But that's all by the way. Well one day in Singapore I ran into a man called Zimmermann—a big, blue-eyed, soft-mouthed brute with a tongue that would have wrung tears from a stone. I was on a spree at the time, and he filled me up with drink and talk. It was the drink that did it, for I knew from the beginning that the man was a liar. At any rate I chucked my ship and went into business with him. He had a marine store in the Chinese quarter, and he swore his profits were over £1200 a year. There's no need to tell you the thing was a fraud, and but for a woman I'd ha' been back at my ship in a month's time. I was a fool, but she was soft and coaxing—pretty, too, with eyes that just seemed to eat into your heart.

"She was a Chee-chee, of course, although her skin was as white as wax, but I hadn't married her a week before I discovered she'd a temper like the seven devils. Still, I belted her once or twice, and when we were alone I could manage her all right.

"Then one fine day the police tumbled in on us. I knew nothing—I swear I didn't. Opium was the trouble—selling 'chandu' glass to the Chinese. Zimmermann got eighteen months, and although I was as innocent as you are they landed me with sixty days. You can guess what that did for me—two months breaking stones in Singapore gaol side by side with all the drunk Tamils and Chinese cut-throats.

"The girl stuck to me when I came out. I'll say that for her. But what could I do? I couldn't go back to my ship. I couldn't go home, and one way and another we sank pretty low.

"What's that got to do with this place, you say?

"Well, I'm coming to that. One day when things were about their worst I fell in with Ah Wee, the boss of this mud heap, and he told me I could make a fortune with a store on the mine. Opium for the coolies. That was the touch. The old shark wouldn't take the risk himself, but he put me on to the right people and paid me a good sum monthly for the stuff.

TO-DAY'S RACING

AT THE VALLEY.

(By Rapier.)

THE second day of the Easter Race Meeting at the Valley to-day will be featured by the meeting of Trentbridge, the Derby winner, and Diana Bay, Mr. Dunbar's crack, in the Easter Stakes over a mile.

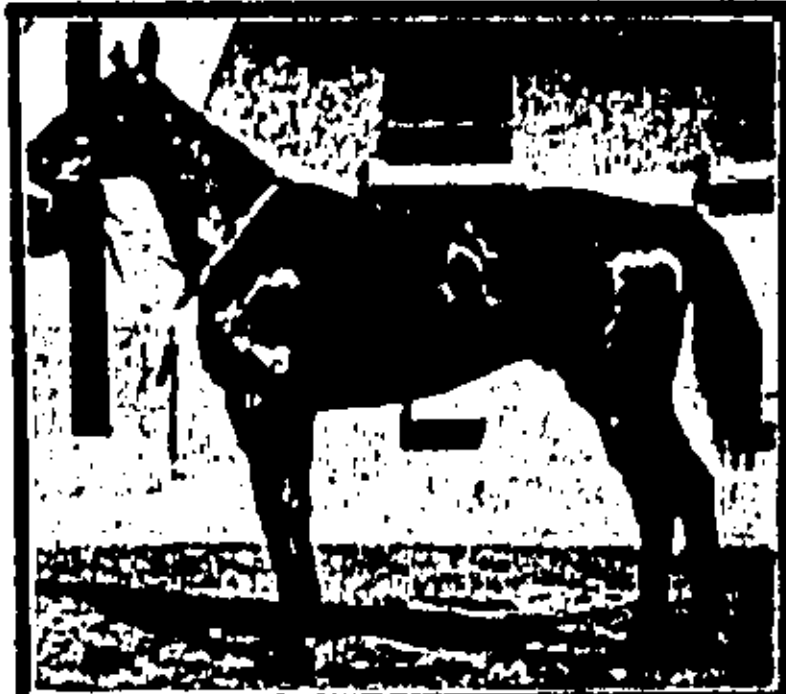

Mr. V. V. Needa, the former Shanghai jockey who rode Trentbridge to victory over Jack in the Derby, is confident of winning to-day's race. And I think he will. Mr. Frost will be up on Diana Bay, but he will find it difficult to stave off Mr. Needa's challenge in the last quarter, the Bay being a one-paced pony.

It will be the race of greatest interest, in spite of the second appearance of the new subs in the Tower Stakes and the Mongolian Stakes. Diana Bay has only been beaten once in three seasons, and that was at the Annual Meeting when Mr. Needa, on Sadko, surprised Mr. "Billy" Hill to record one of the most popular wins. It is more than probable that history will repeat itself and Mr. Needa will again be responsible for the downfall of the former champion.

Although well beaten by Liberty Bay in the Champions, Trentbridge gave a very fine display of stamina in the face of a gruelling pace. Diana Bay is not as good as her stable mate, and she is conceding 8 lbs. to the Dynastie entrant. There lies the answer to the problem as to who will win.

Diana Bay.

CHINA recorded a brilliant victory over England in the Final Round of the Sunday Herald Charity Soccer Cup competition when they won by 5 goals to 3 on the Club ground on Saturday, after being 3 goals down in the first 40 minutes and a goal in arrears at the interval. The above photographs were taken before the game. Left—China:—Lim Thin-chai; Li Ting-sang, Lau Mau; Li Kwok-shui, Leung Wing-chiu, Tong Kwan; Yeung Shui-yick, Mak So, Fung King-cheung, Tam Kong-pak and Ip Pak-wa. Right—England:—Comber; Allen; S. Strange; Pardoe; Shirras, Bliss; Gough, Bryant, Langmead, Ridley and Hocquard.

Snippets From The "Sunday Herald" Cup Final

(By OUTSIDE LEFT)

WELL, what do you think of these International finalists?—England and China, clever and brilliant.

No freak teams these, bashing their way into the final round—but teams representative of the best of the youthful and mature genius in football.

A FIGURE as in Greek tragedy, emerges from the Sunday Herald Cup final—Strange, the captain of England, who disappointed by erratic clearances.

One of the cleverest and safest full backs in the Colony—the corner stone of the Colony's defence, Strange made a desperate, but hopeless, attempt to stem the Chinese attack. He made things worse by his blunderings and the ease with which he fell into traps set for him.

WATCHING Strange I could visualize Tam Kong-pak's brilliant Chinese footballer, in his memorable game against the Borderers at Caroline Hill two months ago, when in dropping back into defence, he bungled things up clearly and added to the Borderers' score by shooting into his own goal.

YOU cannot explain these blunders, risks must be taken—Tam, dropping back into defence on Saturday affected a brilliant save, when at great danger to himself he hurled himself at a drive from Shirras with Lim Thin-chai in position! He narrowly deflected the ball over the cross bar, to the opposite corner to custodian.

CHINA'S master goal-keeper, Lim Thin-chai, beaten on three occasions by easy shots, one of which took him completely unawares.

ENGLAND'S recruit, Comber in goal, his first real test. With nerves of steel gave a display nothing short of marvellous, and in the second half brought the crowd to their feet with a display that eventually heartened his harassed colleagues.

A VAST smile spread over the faces of England supporters when the China team were seen in their new coloured jerseys with the half time score of three goals to two against them—but the smiles died away in the second half when the Chinese supporters, cheering the Green (hounds) (China were dressed in jade coloured jerseys) saw their team sweep on to victory.

DUE credit must be given to China since her return to local football, and it can be said that their return to form is welcomed in all football circles.

THEIR recent triumph in the Shield and the Sunday Herald Cup are but two of the four major soccer competitions which make up the season's big four, and all indications point to an easy victory this afternoon in the Lai Wah Cup Final, when they meet the Civilians.

THE Senior Division of the League is as good as theirs, thus completing one of the most brilliant achievements in the history of local soccer. Good luck to them.

A LARGE amount of Saturday's success is due to the Chinese left wing—Tam Kong-pak and Ip Pak-wa, who play with a rare understanding. The former is a great schemer, being able, even under the heaviest of pressure, to hold the ball until his colleagues have shaken off the opposition and positioned themselves.

HIS speed was clearly demonstrated on Saturday when time and again Leung Wing-chiu sent out long passes for him to snap up and round Pardoe with the greatest of ease.

LEUNG KING-CHIU was another great schemer, and clearly dominated the England forward line throughout the game. His ground passes were excellent while his marking of Langmead left nothing to be desired.

ENGLAND should have gone farther ahead on two separate occasions, when both Langmead and Ridley completely missed open goals.

WITH all England's faults, they could at least claim one distinction, that of having a left wing equally as good as China's.

HOCQUARD was perhaps the most perfect of the four wingers on display, his centres landing in the corner spot every time. In Liddle he had an ideal partner and the pair combined very effectively, especially in the second half when these two alone were responsible for England's attack.

BRYANT, the Artillery is also worthy of praise for his praise-worthy efforts in the first half. An opportunistic Bryant hardly lets anything slip past him without first of all having a shot at it.

IN this afternoon's game, the Chinese team should secure an overwhelming win over the Civilians, who, owing to injuries and other minor occurrences, have been unable to field their best representative side.

Tientsin Rout Weak

Shanghai Soccer Team 7 to 1

Tientsin, Saturday.

TIENTSIN beat Shanghai by the overwhelming score of 7 goals to 1 in the Interport Soccer encounter played here to-day.

This defeat was not surprising in view of Shanghai's inability to send up a team representative of their best talent.

Only four of the Shanghai team which visited Hong Kong last January, were among those who made the trip North.

Hay, of the Argyls, who will be remembered in the Colony for his excellent showing against the Colony's forwards in the last Interport, filled his old position at left half, while K. C. Chen of the Tung Hwa,

OPEN LETTER TO CHINA.

To Y. K. Mok, Esq., Chairman of the Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation, Hong Kong.

Dear Sir,—Congratulations on your team's wonderful effort on the Club ground—three goals down—then 2-3 in arrears and a final 5-3.

I think your side will win the Lai Wah Cup.

I admire all your players, especially Tam Kong-pak, Ip Pak-wa and Leung Wing-chiu who played such a tremendous part in your team's brilliant win.

Yours sincerely,

"OUTSIDE LEFT."

LAI WAH CUP FINAL

Chinese To Meet Civilians.

TO-DAY'S SOCCER GAME

THE Final Round of the Lai Wah Cup competition takes place this afternoon on the Club ground between the Civilians and the Chinese at 4.15 p.m.

The Civilians have a very weak team out, and are without their regular leader, A. V. Gosano, who has been compelled to drop out of the team owing to a knee injury. His place will be taken by Johnson, of the Police. Bliss, of Kowloon, is another who is unable to turn out, and his vacancy will be filled by Hynes, of the Club.

The following will represent the Civilians:—Marques (Recrolo); Martin (Club) and S. Strange (Club); Hynes (Club), Channing (Police) and A. Duncan (Club); B. Gosano (St. Joseph's), E. Strange (Club), Johnson (Police), Shepherd (Police) and F. Santos (Recrolo). Reserves:—Blackburn (Police), Bickford (Kowloon) and Figueiredo (Recrolo).

The Chinese team will be selected from the following:—

Lim Thin-chai, Li Tin-sang, Lau Mau, Li Kwok-shui, Leung Wing-chiu, Tong Kwan, Yeung Shui-yick, Yeung In-chai, Cheng Shui-hong, Mak-So, Fung King-cheung, Tam Kong-pak and Ip Pak-wa.

McCorkindale & Neusel

TAME CONTEST ENDS IN DRAW.

FAMOUS AUTHOR'S IMPRESSIONS.

FIGHT WHICH LACKED "DEVIL"

By LOUIS GOLDING

(Author of "Magnolia Street")

London, March 14.

The last time I was in the Albert Hall, Furtwangler was conducting his orchestra. It was sentimental but exceedingly competent.

Last night, when Don McCorkindale, the South African, fought Walter Neusel, the German, it was sentimental, but not at all so competent. I don't mean the fighting only. I mean the decision, too.

Both men fought with charm and courage, like a couple of Old Boys from the Old School. It was a pity that Neusel nearly filled McCorkindale's eye in the ninth round. I'm sure that Neusel was sorer about it than his opponent. But if, for round after round, you score point after point in at least eight out of those twelve rounds, even though you fail to do any serious damage during the course of them, I do not see how you can fail to be declared the winner. But Neusel was not. The crowd wondered, rather vociferously. So did I.

But Neusel was a perfect gentleman about it. He comes from Westphalia a very well-behaved country of clear streams and limpid meadows.

The organ that preluded the entertainment was in rather mournful mood—a little suggestive of the music they played in Hollywood when Laughton-Nero consigned the Christians to the lions.

PRIZE GLADIATORS.

The South African man and the German youth continued the illusion when their dressing-gowns slid from their shoulders and they stood, like a pair of Caesar's prize gladiators, isolated in the chalky glare. It persisted during the first round, when McCorkindale swung round his grand left hook, again and again, and one hoped that this might prove one of those fights when the blood sings and the eye starts perilously from the head. He was admirable again in the last round.

But it was too late then. There had been all those intervening rounds, with Neusel hitting away two-fisted to the stomach, the chin, the stomach, the chin—a model of pugilistic decorum. The fight lacked devil, in a word. One remembered tough little featherweights at the Ring in Blackfriars, their fists rippling and glancing like summer lightning.

One remembered Larry Gains at Olympia, padding stealthily like a black puma, in the traces of a poor bewildered ball—Carnera, by name. One remembered that ebony arm thrashing forth lean and terrific like the piston of a railway engine.

"LOSE YOUR TEMPER."

The crowd, too, remembered nights of doughtier combat: "Lose your temper!" the cry came out of the remote, coyly-curtained boxes in the stratosphere. "Lose your temper," proclaimed a cigar at my elbow; "lose your temper or I lose my money!" The cigar had travelled all the way from Crews and must travel back again in an hour. "Three hundred miles for this!" the cigar smouldered despondently. It was looking forward to more fiery melodrama when it journeyed to Belle Vue, in Manchester, a week or two weeks from now.

There was a very pretty moment before the fight started, very much in the spirit of it all. Mrs. McCorkindale ascended to her husband's corner and kissed him amid a splutter of magnesium flares. It had been announced that she was to second him, but this attention, though briefer, was at least as heartening.

It was a sad thing that poor Neusel had no lovely maiden to kiss him, too. It might have inspired just that extra dram of inspiration which would have won the fight for him indubitably.

A secret admirer had sent him a small silver horse-shoe, but that was not enough; do the trick. Or perhaps it was.

THAT PUNCH IN THE EYE.

It may, after all, have been just effective enough to prevent the fight going against him. He was, it should be reported, brought down in the first round for a count of eight. That was the only really formidable blow on either side throughout the encounter.

The punch in the eye was a contretemps, and no gentleman would insist on it.

If McCorkindale had had the stamina to launch out that kick-of-a-horse once or twice again, in the second round, there would have been no third.

No, the boxing was not of an excitement to prevent the eye winking from well-known faces to face to face among the ringside cognoscenti. Is this Jack Hyton, looking so surprisingly like an expugilator? How dexterous is the white tie of Jeff Dickson, the promoter! Is this Lady Drogheda, looking rather like a high lady from the court of Caesar Augustus?

And you, O minor poet, I never suspected that you dipped your delicate pen in boxers' blood! I regret that the brew was not a little more heady last night!

The British team of squash racket players won the singles match in the international squash racket contest with a United States team by four matches to one at Scarborough, N.Y.

VON KEHRING MAY GIVE UP TENNIS.

Man Who Made Game in Hungary.

THE news that Baron von Kehring will, in all probability, never play lawn tennis again because of heart weakness, will be received with regret by followers of the game all over the world, and particularly in England, where his charming personality and indomitable spirit on court made him countless friends.

The name of von Kehring is synonymous with Hungarian lawn tennis. Ever since those far-off days before the war this magnificent-made, quiet-spoken now has been in the forefront of international lawn tennis. He has won the championship of his native Hungary on several occasions, and holds the title to-day.

M.C.C. TEAM LOSE SOCCER ENCOUNTER

Lose To Hebrew Club By 3-1.

Maurice Tate, plus a big pipe and his normal grin, arrived with a football ground, in Melbourne to play inside right for the M.C.C. cricketers against Hakoah, a Hebrew club whose name means strength.

He had just lunched on soup, mixed grill and ice-cream; his shorts fitted like a glove, and, excusably, he was less nimble than David Jack.

The cricketers, mostly about twice the weight of their opponents, scored first, failed to stand the pace—and Hakoah won by three goals to one.

The outstanding Englishman was the speedy Ames at right back and "mild of all work" Hammond was a fine centre half-back, and Duckworth neat in goal. The best forward was the smallest—fast nippy Paynter, who scored from a cross by Mitchell on the other wing.

LARWOOD RESENTS HIS BARRACKERS.

Does Not Wish To Tour Australia Again

Larwood, the English fast bowler, has intimated, according to a statement in Perth (W.A.), that he will not visit Australia again, says Reuter.

He is said to be very distressed at the continuous barracking he has had to undergo in connection with leg-theory bowling, and he referred to an unpleasant incident at Quorn when a party of irresponsible youths hooted at him in the train during the journey from Melbourne to Perth.

J. B. ROSS WINS GOLF CUP.

Shanghai Visitors' Prize At Fanling.

TIE WITH G. C. WORRALL

J. B. Ross won the Shanghai Visitors' Golf Cup at Fanling over the weekend after tying with G. C. Worrall.

Both Ross and Worrall returned cards of 197-20=147, but as Ross had an 87 as against Worrall's 91 for the second round he was awarded the trophy according to the conditions of the competition. E. Lewis was third with 188=16=150. His rounds were 79 and 87.

At The World's Edge

there he was. What could I do? I didn't dare kick him out, although I see now it would have been a thousand times better if I had.

"From that day everything went wrong. He did no work drank like a fish, and, of course, he made a big hole in our profits. But that wasn't all. There was only the one woman, and he made love to her—filched her from me, like the low brute he was, until she couldn't stand the sight of me.

"One might he came into the house—I'd insisted on his living in a separate shanty. We were having a regular dust-up. I was jealous—I admit it—and I'd just struck Mary Isabelle in the face when Zimmermann came up and took me by the arm.

"That's not the way to treat a lady, my man," says he, in his best German accent. Then he turns to Mary Isabelle, very polite:

"Come with me," he says. "I will protect you from this beast." And as he said it, he gave me a wink, the dirty hypocrite. I could have murdered him there, only he was strong, with great muscles like a bullock.

"Of course, after that she worshipped him, and, although I knew she was playing me false, I pretended not to care.

"That made her wild." He stopped for a moment to wipe his brow and pour himself another drink. The sun was beginning to sink, and Ahmat came up to say that we were ready to start.

The man looked up at me with a mute appeal in his eyes, just like a dog that knows somehow it is going to be poisoned.

"I'll cut it short," he said feverishly. "Only wait. You promised to hear me out."

I spoke to Ahmat, and the man went on:

"It was funny, the way it all came out. One evening I'd just been seeing a new lot of 'chandu' unloaded, and was coming home past Zimmermann's place, when I heard voices. It was quite dark, and the windows were open. Of course she was there, and I listened. Zimmermann was speaking. He'd tasted gall once, and didn't like it, or he wouldn't have spoken as he did. What I heard was: 'If you as much as try to put anything in his food—any poison games—I will leave you,' and then the singing-song pleading: 'But I love you, and I can't stand it any longer.'

"It was the black touch in her coming out, and after that you bet I was mighty careful.

"I had a dog—a dirty little mongrel, but I liked the brute. He was half fox-terrier, and when he put his nose into my hand and licked my fingers I sort of felt somehow I wasn't the only bit of white in this God-forsaken hole. Well, one afternoon Mary Isabelle didn't turn up to tiffin. We had a Chinese servant, of course, but Mary Isabelle did the cooking herself. It must have been Providence that helped me. At any rate, I had a kind of forewarning, and before touching the curry I gave the dog some, and waited. Poor brute—if you'd seen him die, writhing there on the floor and his tongue rolling out, your own heart would have hardened.

"I made up my mind pretty quick. She was cunning, but when a man's bent on revenge the devil helps him. I went over to the store where, unbeknown to anyone, I kept a revolver.

"I looked at him pityingly. Poor wretch! His cup had been pretty full, and he'd drunk it to the dregs.

"But the woman?" I said. "What about her?" He looked puzzled for a moment. Then he gave a short, dry laugh.

"Come with me," he said. "It won't take a minute."

I followed him across the wharf through the foul swamp until we reached Ah Wee's house.

My companion pushed open the door with a kick and shouted out to Ah Wee in Malay:

"Hey! you yellow rascal. Here's the boss come in to see your wife. Trot her out, quick!"

Ah Wee, trembling with politeness, ushered us into his best room. Lying back on a Chinese bed and smoking a cigarette was a rather frail-looking half-caste woman with long, unkempt hair and great, soft, lustreous eyes. As we came in, she turned her face to the wall.

"Not much fight in her now," said my companion. "I sold her to Ah Wee. Only a Chinese could keep a . . . like that in order."

Ten minutes later I was steaming out of the creek. Already we had under the bamboo planks. It's funny, you know, but I was as cool as ice. I remember I took out the cartridges and oiled the thing all over. Then I went across to Zimmermann's house. She saw what was up, and her face went ghastly. It couldn't get any whiter than it was by nature, but there was a yellow, sickening look in her eyes that made my heart throb.

"Zimmermann was innocent of the poisoning. I spotted that at the first glance, but it only made revenge all the sweeter. I pulled out my gun and covered him. 'Hands up, you dirty poisoner!' I said, and while he rose, only half understanding and nearly sick with fear, she came to me and threw her arms round my knees. Oh, it wasn't of me she was thinking.

"Don't Charlie, don't," she said, like a two-penny Ophelia; 'I did it. He had nothing to do with it. Before God, he's innocent.'

"Walk out before me, slowly, with your hands raised," I said to Zimmermann. Then she became like a maniac. She flew at me, scratched me, cursed me, slobbered over me, tore at my clothes, and put her teeth into my leg. But I was like a demon. Nothing seemed to hurt me, and, getting exasperated at last, I laid her out with a crack under the chin with the butt-end of my revolver.

"Now march," I said to Zimmermann, and I walked him down the narrow path to the wharf—we lived quite close—right on to the end of the pier. My God, but he was a coward, and his knees were knocking like a sick horse. At the very edge, just behind that rotten beam there, I halted him.

"Look down, and see how you like your grave," I said. He couldn't swim, and you can see for yourself that even if a man could swim he wouldn't have much chance.

"Which'll you have?" I said to him, tapping my gun pointing with my eyes to the oily waters below. "Don't say I'm not kind. You can have your choice."

"He began to blubber like a child. 'Don't murder me, for God's sake, Charlie. It's her fault. I swear it was. Let me go away, and I won't peach I'll never trouble you again. Mein Gott, I swear it.'

"You're a slobbering coward; a filthy, low-down coward," I said, contemptuously, and then I did a dirty trick. God knows why, but I couldn't help it. I turned away, and for a moment I lowered my gun, as if he weren't worth shooting.

"He was quick, but I was quicker, and before he could reach me I fired. At three yards it brought him up dead. He staggered, and threw up his arms. For a moment he tottered on the edge, his mouth wide agape, and his eyes wide open, with the whites all showing. Then he fell backwards. There was a dull splash. A second or two later there was a swirl in the water, and, although I hadn't the heart to look over, I knew the 'cross' were doing their work."

He stopped breathless for a moment, his hands shaking, and helped himself again to whisky.

"Do you wonder now that a man drinks?" he repeated half-apolgetically. "Oh, yes, you needn't look at me like that. I've had my punishment, and to-night I'm going to finish it. You can't take me back, and I can't stick this any longer. But I don't want the infernal waiting and delay of a trial and a lot of silly newspaper men messing round. I guess I'll choose my own way."

I looked at him pityingly. Poor wretch! His cup had been pretty full, and he'd drunk it to the dregs.

"But the woman?" I said. "What about her?" He looked puzzled for a moment. Then he gave a short, dry laugh.

"Come with me," he said. "It won't take a minute."

Hong Kong, 11th April, 1933.

passed the bend, and the ugly swamp had given way to a broad expanse of dark-blue sea. The landscape had suddenly broadened out. It was the hour of sunset—that golden hour of the East when Europe is forgotten and the most wonderful nature in the world offers its evening sacrifice to the skies. It is this hour that makes man glad to be alive, glad even to be alone. . . . Far away as the eye could see lay the golden, palm-groved coast of Malaya, with the jungle stretching back to the blue range of mountains against the sky-line. Before us, glittering like a pearl in the long, warm, rich beauty of the fading sunlight, stood the white walls of Port Dickson. Nothing remained to remind us of the derelict we had left behind. But as the little launch passed from the muddy current of the river into the clean, blue waters of the open sea, far away from behind the point came the dull, muffled sound of a revolver.

BOBBY JONES BEATEN.

Los Angeles.

Bobby Jones and Leo Diegel, who is a member of the American Ryder Cup team to play Great Britain this year, were surprisingly beaten by 3 up and 1 to play in a best ball foursome by the "business men golfer," George von Elm, and Macdonald Smith. About 3,500 people turned up to watch the match, which was played in spite of occasional slight tremors.—Reuter.

STICKYBEAK THROWS MR. PEARSE TWICE

IN THE SAME RACE.

A DISAPPOINTINGLY small crowd witnessed Mr. "Johnny" Heard's success during the first day of the Easter Race Meeting at the Valley on Saturday. Mr. Heard, going out in eight races, recorded three firsts, three seconds and a third. He has now had 13 wins at the Valley this season—Mr. "Leo" Frost has only 14 to date.

Mr. Benny Proulx had the distinction of bringing National Day third in the Valleys to pay $83.50—the highest dividend of the day. Mr. E. O. Butler rode Gay Butterfly to victory in the classic to pay $53.80. Dividends, on the whole were very substantial.

The new batch of subs. did not come up to expectations, De Minimis clocking 1.00.1 as against The Goat's 0.59.2 in the Wong Nei Chongs, and Gay Butterfly covering six furlongs in 1.32.4 as against Swale's 1.33.4 at the Annual Meeting. Mr. H. V. Pearse had the misfortune to be thrown twice by Stickybeak in the same race and was carried off the course suffering from concussion. He is not, however, seriously injured.

RUSSIAN INDUSTRY IMPORTS.

£2,100,000 Equipment Contracts Cancelled.

Moscow.
A new system regulating the importation of equipment for industry into the Soviet is being established.
In view of the fact that a number of industrial organisations in Russia have requested the import of equipment which is either actually manufactured or can be manufactured in the U.S.S.R., the people's Commissar for heavy industries, Ordzhonikidze, has issued orders to cancel the importation of equipment, to a total of about 21,000,000 gold Roubles (£2,100,000).
Orders for this equipment have now been placed with various Soviet works. — Reuter.

POSTCARD ARRIVES 25 YEARS LATE.

Paris.
A postcard has taken 25 years, 3 months and 16 days to travel from Rheims to Paris, a distance under 100 miles. The woman to whom it was addressed has been dead 22 years.
It has now been delivered at the correct address — but with a request for 1d., because the postal charges have gone up since 1907. — Reuter.

The blocking by France of Mussolini's proposal for a four-power directorate of England, France, Germany and Italy to keep the peace in Europe for at least ten years has added significance to the gathering in Rome.

Benes Watching.
Keeping a watchful eye on every move is Europe's most experienced veteran in the international game—Eduard Benes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia. Cabinets have come and gone at Prague but Benes remains.

He has been foreign minister of his country since the autumn of 1918, occupying the office before Czechoslovakia was on the map. He is credited now with having originated the new bonds for the Little Entente. Under them the three countries act as one in foreign affairs. None will sign a treaty without the consent of the others and if one signs all sign.

Obviously all this forms a solid anti-revisionist bloc to offset the hopes and aspirations of Germany, Austria and Hungary, supported as they are by Italy. France's objection to Mussolini's proposal was centred on the clause proposing revision of the post-war agreements. Further, it is viewed as a sharp setback to Italian aims in the Balkans. Talk of an Italian-Romanian accord, isolating Yugoslavia, has faded. — A.P.

CHILD SMUGGLER ARRESTED.

Worked Alone At 7 Years Of Age.

Cologne.
A girl arrested at Mariadorf, near Aix-la-Chapelle, on charges of smuggling was only 7 years old.
She had in her possession a thousand contraband cigarettes and a season railway ticket for travelling from Cologne to Mariadorf.
The girl is alleged to have successfully carried out a number of smuggling expeditions without any assistance. — Reuter.

GERMAN COMMITTEE FOR CHINA.

Anti-Japanese Meeting Dispersed In Berlin.

Berlin.
A demonstration of the "German Committee for China against Japanese War" was broken up by the police in Berlin.
Permission had been given for the demonstration on condition that no foreigners spoke. Police forbade the well-known author, Egon Erwin Kisch, to continue his speech and interrupted two other speakers.
They dissolved the meeting when references were made to "protection against gas attacks in Germany." — Reuter.
